

Mayo Volunteers at the Front.

Mrs. McInerney, Claremorris has received a letter from her husband who joined the Irish Guards at the outbreak of the war, that he is now better of his wounds and preparing for the front again. Tom Malley, another Claremorris man, has written to his mother that he has been wounded and expects to be sent home soon. Both these soldiers were active members, of the Claremorris Corps of the Irish Volunteers.

Killed in action

Connaught Telegraph, June 9th, 1917: "We regret to record the death at the front of Private J. McLoughlin, aged 19 years, son of Patrick McLoughlin, compositor, of 56 Parnell Square , Dublin, and late of Castlebar. Mr. McLoughlin has two other sons serving 'at the front.'"

A 'compositor' was a term used in the printing trade, but it has died with the coming of new technology. Compositors are now called paste-up artists.
